Housing is considered affordable if it consumes less than 30% of a household’s gross income. At higher levels, families must choose between housing and other basic needs and will struggle to weather financial setbacks. In Minnesota, housing costs continue to consume a large portion of families’ income. For many, extended economic hardship is taking a toll.

The table above shows the number and percent of households at different income levels that pay 30% or more of household income for rental or ownership costs. It illustrates that the burden of housing costs weighs more heavily on lower-income families.

Even before the current economic downturn, housing needs were severe. In 2008, 1 in 8 Minnesota households spent at least half of their income on housing, up from 1 in 15 in 2000. Minnesota experienced the fastest increase of extremely cost burdened households of any state in the nation during this time period.

In 2006-2008, about 76% of Otter Tail County residents owned their home and 24% were renters. Of these, approximately 24.6% of homeowners and 39.2% of renters in Otter Tail County spent 30% or more of their household income on housing.
Lower-income households face extreme affordability challenges.

The chart below compares median earnings across different occupations to the income required to afford housing.4

HOUSING COSTS

In Otter Tail County, a median-priced home cost $116,800 in 2009, excluding foreclosures. The fair market rent for a two-bedroom apartment was $588 per month in 2010. Since 2001, home prices have increased by 29%, and the fair market rent has increased by 15%, after adjusting for inflation.5

INCOME

In Otter Tail County, a family of four with two full-time wage earners needs to earn a combined annual salary of $45,227 to afford the basic cost of living.6 The median household income for Otter Tail County was $42,873 in 2008.7
